EXPECTANCY MOSCOW EMBASSIES

Moscow, Aug. 1.—The expected meeting between Marshal Stalin and the Western diplomats may take place in the next 24 hours, possibly even tonight; according to opinion in some well-informed foreign circles in Moscow. While there is no confirmation from Soviet circles that such a meeting is expected, the atmosphere in the embassies of the Western countries—working over the bank holiday weekend—was one of considerable expectancy. Members of the staff of the British, French and American embassies are staying in Moscow over the weekend. Normally they would have gone to a country house.

The Soviet Commander in Germany, Marshal Sokolovsky, is believed to be in Moscow, and it is likely that he, as well as M. Molotov, would attend any conference between Stalin and the Western powers. At such a conference the views of the Western powers would be presented by the "little" three -- Mr Frank Roberts, personal envoy of the British Foreign Secretary, General Walter Bedell Smith, American Ambassador, and M. Chataigneru, French Ambassador.

Molotov agreed that this proposal would be taken under consideration. West Allied circles were considerably encouraged by developments in the past 24 hours. They considered Molotov's return to Moscow as an indication that he wants to discuss the Berlin and German situation, and has no intention of slamming the door on talks which might provide a solution to the German deadlock. They pointed out that if Russia's position was completely unconciliatory it would have been easy for Molotov simply to remain on his vacation, while the crisis dragged on and the Western representation drifted slowly through the normal diplomatic

Upset Parade At London Games

By "RECORDER"

· Never have the Olympic Games produced as many upsets as has the present series at London. Of the nine athletic events thus far decided, four only have been won as generally predicted.

The first big upset was, perhaps, the most sensational of all. Who would have ever conceded Australia's Fred Winter a chance of taking first place against the three Americans? He not only did it at the relatively poor winning height of 6 feet 6 inches but, even more upsetting, an entirely unknown Norwegian, Bjox, Paulson, won second place by virtue of fewer misses up to 6 feet 5 inches, at which height he tied with two of the Americans and France's Georges Damitio.

ADVICE TO OPENING BATS

"Never Hook Before Lunch. Never Cut Before Tea" By ARCHIE QUICK

Just before Cyril Washbrook and George Emmett went in to bat on England's second innings against Australia in the Third Test at Old Trafford, great Herbert Sutcliffe, than whom there is no greater judge of opening batting, said to me: "I am going to watch those fellows carefully.

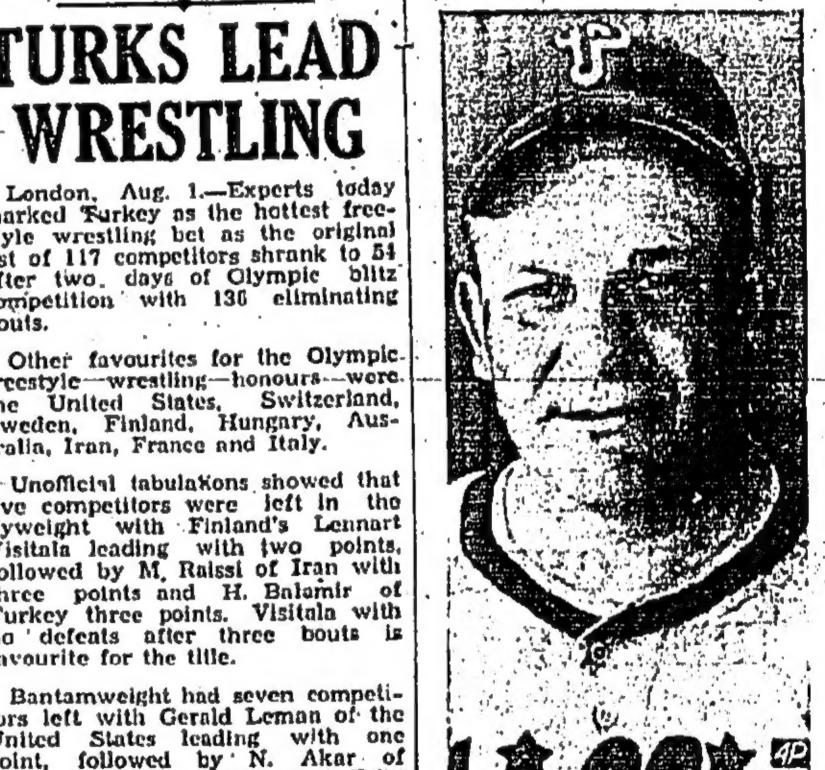

There is something wrong with English batting and I think there are two reasons for its failure. One is that we are not playing down the line of the ball. The other is that we are too adventurous too soon. Jack Hobbs always impressed upon me, and we both followed his advice: never hook before lunch, never cut before tea. But these chaps are getting out doing just that early on in their innings."

Popular Cyril Washbrook had a benefit match in Manchester on Test Sunday and old memories were revived when I saw George Duckworth keeping wicket to the bowling of Big Bill O'Reilly. It was conducted in high good humour and genial solemnity.

During the next week plans for the final knock-out of Germany and, secretly, for the entry of Russia into the Far East war, were completed.

Above all they agreed, in the Livadia Palace, former home of the Czars, on the future of Germany.

The unity of the Allies at Yalta-with the Russians advanoing at an unprecedented rate, with the Allied air fleets pounding the German cities to rabble, and with the "beginning of the end" of Japan in sight, thanks to Stalin's promise to come in-was something almost tangible.

When his partner jumped three spades, McCormick (South) knew that the whole future of the hand depended upon the number of aces held by North. Therefore, instead of bidding four hearts or any other sult, he jumped right to four no trump. His partner's fourspade, bid indicated that they were off one ace, so he had to make a choice. Should he bid six spades, or six no trump?

McCormick felt sure that is North did not have the ace of clubs, he at least had the queenthus displaying an optimism which lead of the five of hearts with dummy's acc, led a small spade to the king, then made a very nice play. He led the jack of diamonds. West could not be severely critielsed for not going up, with the nce; at least, he did not, so the jack held the trick.

Now all of the spades were run. the king of hearts enshed, and the king of clubs overtaken in dummy with the ace. On the queen and jack of clubs McCormick discarded his king and queen of diamonds. He was left with the deuce of hearts and ten of diamonds in dumrhy, and in his own hand the queen and seven of hearts.

Poor West was squeezed. If he threw away the acc of diamonds, dummy's ten would be good; while if he discarded his heart, McCormick would lead dummy's deuce of hearts to the queen and the seven-spot, would give him the last

Krupps Verdict Sets Knotty Problem

CONFISCATION BIG ISSUE BECOMES

Nuremberg, Aug. 1.—The Krupp war crimes trial has touched off a battle for $1,000,000,000, it became apparent today. Perhaps only the U.S. Supreme Court can settle the issue.

In convicting Alfred Krupp of slave labour, malpractices and plunder of foreign industry, an American court yesterday also ordered confiscation of his property.

What exactly Krupp's Jackson, President convicting court, was against permitting the ment to become enmeshed in such a maze. He dissented from this part of the sentence but agreed with the 12-year-term imposed on Alfred Krupp. However, he said, he thought the other goal terms for ten of the Krupp directorate were too severe.

There Will Be No War Affirms American Politician

Washington, Aug. 1 .- Republican Representative Karl Stefan today predicted on his return from a tour of Europe, including Germany, that there "will not be war because I do not believe that Russia wants one and I know that the United States does . not." Stefan is the chairman of the Armed Forces sub-committee of the House Appropriations Committee. He visited Berlin and flew with an airlift which he called "the greatest flying feat in history."

Mr Stefan declared, "The world is amazed at the experiness with which United States planes conveyed on Berlin from all over the globe and immediately co-ordinated into a smoothly operating machine performing a gigantic task," Stefan said he could not praise too highly the pilots and ground crews who were responsible for flights into Berlin and said. "I have never seen such flying in all my life." He added. "I have heard estimates that the nirlift is costing the United States as much as $100,000 a day but I think maybe it is worth it.

NOBODY WOULD WIN He could not predict the outcome of the Berlin crisis but said, "Nobody would win another war." He sald, "I am hopeful that the United Nations will be strong enough to bring the peoples of the world together so humanity can settle down to live in peace." Mr. Stefan attended the organisation for European Economic Cooperation meeting in Paris on July 25, when delegates Administrator Paul Hoffman declare that the European recovery programme is intended to achieve recovery and not mere relief. "I think Mr Hoffman's talk did a great deal to clarify questions in the minds of the representatives," he said. He added that before Hoffman appeared many people in Europe still wondered if the United States purpose in instituting the recovery plan was not principally selfish. HUMANITARIAN MOTIVES

Mr Stefan said, "They were left convinced that our motives are humanitarian and I believe that they are sincerely grateful and determined to make the project successful." Mr Stefan added that he visited 300 farms in France, Germany,

Czechoslovakia Switzerland and was encouraged by the prospects of the crops which are better than in many years. He said the housing shortage is still a tremendous problem in Europe, especially in Germany. He said the majority, who were forced to flee with only the barest essentials when the Communists took over, were now thrown on the economy of Germany and there is not enough food to feed them nor shelter to house them.

Stefan said the principal need was for medicine, disinfectant and equipment, because tuberculosis and other diseases are spreading like wildfire due to the crowded conditions. He added that the International Red Cross is doing what it can but more is needed through private channels.-United Press.
